CLIENT RISK ASSESSMENT

In order to manage your assets effectively, JMMB would like you to indicate your ability to tolerate volatility in your portfolio returns, also known as risk tolerance. Your portfolio can be described as the composite of the different investment accounts (or securities) that you own. Risk tolerance can be defined as your ability and willingness to tolerate significant upturns or downturns in the value of your portfolio with the expectation that over time your investments may earn greater returns. To achieve higher returns, investors generally must accept greater volatility in returns on the securities in their portfolio.

Part 1: Risk classification of Products/Services

The products offered by JMMB to investors are classified in the range of low risk to medium risk for fixed income and money market products. Equity products are generally more volatile (risky) than fixed income products. While some of this risk can be reduced by diversifying investors' portfolios, there is still some possibility of principal loss.

Part 2: Client's Investment Risk Tolerance

<input type="radio"/>	Conservative (Low Risk)	I/We prefer an investment portfolio that has returns that are expected to be assured, and has little chance of falling below its original value.
<input type="radio"/>	Moderate (Medium Risk)	I/We prefer an investment portfolio that has returns that are expected to be assured, and has little chance of falling below its original value.
<input type="radio"/>	Aggressive (High Risk)	I/We prefer an investment portfolio that is expected to yield high returns, but may have moderate fluctuations in value.

Part 3: Advisory of Discretion on Investment

I agree that in regard to my investments in the EMMA™ which are fixed income related, JMMB will have full discretion to invest on my behalf (inclusive of overseas / offshore investments), in accordance with the Agreement and the Client Agreement made between the undersigned Client(s) and JMMB.

I agree that in all equity investments made from the EMMA™, I will retain full discretion to invest as I choose (inclusive of overseas / offshore investments), in accordance with the Agreement or appropriate individual product agreements including but not limited to prospectuses, stock transaction receipts and contract notes. I will rely on the Manager to execute investment activities as I direct. This discretion includes, but is not limited to the purchase or sale of shares in companies listed on recognized stock exchanges through third parties contracted by the Manager.
